BLUESTONE PIETRE

Desde la Edad Media, esta piedra originaria de Bélgica ha sido protagonista de importantes edificios tradicionales en muchas ciudades del norte y centro de Europa. Su belleza desató la envidia atroz de Luis XIV, el Rey Sol, quien espalló este pavimento a su responsable financiero, para crear, con él y un mármol de Carrara, un precioso patio al pie de su habitación, que se convirtió en el corazón de Versalles.

Since the Middle Ages, this Belgian stone has featured in many northern and central European cities' traditional buildings. Its beauty made Louis XIV, the Sun King, atrociously jealous and he appropriated his financial advisor's Bluestone floor so that he could create a lovely courtyard at the foot of his bedchamber, using a combination of bluestone and Carrara marble. This courtyard would become the heart of the Palace of Versailles.
