MAXXI CEMENTI

La antigua Roma creó el auténtico cemento, aquel realizado con pastas y morteros, capaz de resistir la inmersión en agua marina por milenios. Un ejemplo de ello es la famosa bóveda del Panteón Romano. Stendhal la describió como "el más bello recuerdo de la antigua Roma" o Miguel Angel "construido por ángeles y no por humanos". Sin la presencia de este milagroso material jamás se podría haber levantado semejante maravilla.

Real concrete was made in Ancient Rome, using paste and mortar, and it was capable of withstanding salt water for thousands of years. One example of Roman concrete is the famous vault of Rome's Pantheon. Stendhal described it as "the most beautiful souvenir of ancient Rome" and Michael Angelo as "built by angels and not humans". Without the presence of this miraculous material, such a marvel would never have been built.
